What is it?

The mentoring award is an SQA Qualification that will teach you the theory behind mentoring as well as giving you the practical skills to become a mentor.

What will it involve?

This award will be taught in the Granton Campus of Edinburgh College one morning a week and will include lots of discussion, activities and role play. You will be given a pack with all the outcomes you need to pass at the beginning of the course but each week we will go through the information and 'bring it to life' so that you become a confident and effective mentor.

What is the qualification?

The award is a level 4 qualification that is made up of 2 units: 'Mentoring: An Introduction' and 'Mentoring in Practice'. Although both units can be achieved in isolation, both units need to be successfully completed in order to achieve the full award.

How is it assessed?

The first unit will be assessed by an end of unit (multiple choice) online assessment. There will be lots of opportunity to check your knowledge before sitting this assessment and also practice answering the type of questions you will face in the assessment. The second unit is practical and you will be observed as part of it but there will be no online assessment.
